Many people think that when we learn, our brains make new brain cells. But actually, we create new connections between brain cells we already have. In fact, one brain cell can connect with up to 10,000 others.

In the past, people believed the brain "turned off" when we went to sleep. But with new technology, we now know that some parts of the brain stay active during sleep. Sleep is very important for learning because it helps us remember things better. In fact, people who get enough sleep can remember about 20% more than those who do not.

For young people, research shows that learning feels more interesting if they know how it can help them in real life. About 85% of students say they learn better when they understand why a topic is useful. So, it's important for teachers to explain why lessons are helpful.

الاحمر اجابة اختر والازرق اجابة الاكمل

Last week, I learned a new word: "enormous". It means something very, very big! At first, I found it hard to say, but I decided to practice. I wrote it down many times and said it aloud slowly. My friend helped me and put it in a sentence. She said, "The elephant is enormous!" That made me laugh, and I remembered the word better. Learning new words is fun, and it helps me speak better. I felt happy at the end.
